Therapeutic and Reproductive Cloning: Building a Framework to Protect Research
Scientists, patient advocacy groups and social conservatives are debating — with ever more ardor — the moral and legal status of nuclear transfer or cloning technology. The United Nations is wrestling with a proposed treaty calling for a total ban on reproductive and therapeutic cloning. The resolution of the debate will critically influence the future of scientific research. Can the world build a legal framework to protect research? Mr. Siegel, the South Florida attorney who challenged Clonaid regarding its cloning claim the executive director of the Genetics Policy Institute. GPI led non-governmental organizations defending therapeutic cloning the United Nations, and is seeking an advisory opinion from the World Court that opposes reproductive cloning. Do you love the Campus Life? How about making a career in it?
If you enjoy the higher education setting, you need to know that many exciting and rewarding jobs are available for people with the right credentials. In fact, the graduate program that offers an excellent opportunity to gain these credentials is located right here at your alma mater! It’s called the Enrollment Management Program/Higher Education Administration, and it is an interdisciplinary effort involving the School of Education, the School of Business Administration, and the Division of Enrollment Management Continuing Studies. The program has been attracting interest nationwide because it offers the nation’s first Master of Science degree in Education with a Concentration in Enrollment Management. Want to find out more? Applications for Fall 2004 are being considered now – and you may qualify for one of our graduate administrative assistantships. Please contact us by emailing alewis@miami.edu, by calling 305.284.6119, or visit our website www.miami.edu/enrollment-management.
