Charles Powell

A graduate and Doctor in History from Oxford University, he was J.A. Pye Junior Research Fellow at University College, Oxford, and Research Fellow at St. Antony’s College, Oxford, where he coordinated the Contemporary Spanish Studies programme under the supervision of Sir Raymond Carr. He was subsequently History lecturer at Corpus Christi College, and also at University College, Oxford.

Between 1998 and 2002 he was deputy Director of the European Studies programme of the Instituto Universitario Ortega y Gasset, and in 2000-2002 he was also Deputy Director of the Centro Español de Relaciones Internacionales (Fundación José Ortega y Gasset). He is currently Assistant Professor at the Universidad San Pablo-CEU.

In recent years his work has centered on Spanish foreign policy, and more specifically, on Spain’s policies towards the European Union.
